Follow-up Questions

Tom Gatson Suggested:

For Tana's lesson, consider discussing "reasons why the American population was aggressive toward the Japanese." "Were some of the Japanese arrested for their own protection?"

Palmer Announcements

Be watching for workshop on Economics and US History in January (hopefully) in St. Joseph. Grant pending.

Be watching for information on the new education center at Ft. Osage and curriculum to accompany. Will be looking for teacher reviewers and field testers for lessons!

Take the Fed Challenge!

Fed Challenge is an academic competition that provides high school students (grades 9-12) with an insider's view of how the Fed makes monetary policy. From credit card interest rates to the price of a loaf of bread, the effects of monetary policy, set by the Federal Reserve System, are felt in almost every aspect of our daily lives. The District champions travel to Washington, D.C., at the expense of the local Reserve Bank for the national competition. Citibank has established scholarships and grants for Fed Challenge teams at the national level.

Essay Contest

The Economics of Immigration: The essay contest is a wonderful opportunity for students to expand on classroom learning through personal research and reflection. For many students, we believe the contest may lead to an increased interest in future study of economics, business, and finance. The contest provides students the opportunity to develop research, writing, and critical thinking skills. Additionally, the contest also presents students with an opportunity to earn money they can use to further their education after high school. A first-, second-, and third-place winner will be selected from each regional competition (Kansas City, Denver, Oklahoma City, and Omaha).

First Place: $500 EE Savings Bond
Second Place: $200 EE Savings Bond
Third Place: $100 EE Savings Bond

One grand-prize winner will be selected from the four first-place winners and will receive an additional $500 EE Savings Bond.
